They are also about housing for the workforce and different levels of the workforce, as well as housing for the unsheltered. 40 REPORT BY THE INTERIM PRESIDENT & CHIEF EXECUTIVE OFFICER

Milejo Village Grand Opening

Vice Chair Clumpner represented the Housing Commission at the celebration of the grand opening of the Milejo Village development in San Ysidro, which provides 64 affordable rental apartments with supportive services for families that experienced homelessness. Rents at Milejo Village are required to remain affordable for 55 years for families with extremely low income. The Housing Commission awarded 64 rental housing vouchers to this development to help residents pay their rent and remain stably housed. We also supported this development with a $4.2 million loan that consisted of local, state and federal funds the Housing Commission administers. Milejo Village was developed by Jamboree Housing Corporation. One of the new residents at this property, Emily, said she and her children had lived on the streets, in motels and in different homeless shelters. But now that they have a home of their own and Milejo Village, she can read to her children every night, help them with their homework, make them breakfast every morning, and walk them to school.

“Ending Homelessness Summit”

On October 26, 2013, Councilmember Joe LaCava and Housing Commission Executive Vice President of Strategic Initiatives Lisa Jones participated in a homelessness summit organized by California State Senator Catherine Blakespear. The summit featured three panels with discussions about a range of subjects related to addressing the homelessness crisis throughout California and the San Diego County region. The discussions included: homelessness prevention efforts and focusing on populations known to be a high risk; understanding that people experiencing homelessness are neighbors, seniors, college students, veterans and others who are part of the community; ensuring that community engagement about affordable housing developments and housing for people experiencing homelessness continue after the development is completed; and the potential for public-private partnerships with employers and commercial developers to assist with the creation of workforce housing. Discussions like these are important to ongoing efforts to identify and implement solutions. Mr. Davis thanked Senator Blakespear for organizing the event and to everyone who participated.
